ASCS Today: 74 apply for farm assistance

By TOM CONRAD

Farmers that are participating in the 1980 wheat and feed grain program and whose corn and/or grain sorghum yields are cut below 60% of the farm's established yield because of drought should check with the ASCS office for disaster details.

There have been 74 farms to apply for assistance thus far. These farms are ones that have or will cut corn for silage or will abandon it entirely. These farms have applied to have the corn appraised in the field because it will not be harvested for grain.

Any farmers that have not applied for assistance and plan to cut for silage or destroy the crop, should contact the ASCS office to arrange for an appraisal of the damage prior to disposing of the crop.

Corn or grain sorghum that will be harvested for grain will not have to be appraised. However, the producer must apply for disaster assistance, in this case within 15 days of the final date of harvest for the farm. Weight and sales tickets on grain that is sold must be kept and submitted to the ASCS office as production evidence. If the grain will not be sold but will be farm stored, a representative of the office will have to make a farm visit to measure production.

Grain that will be stored must be kept separate by farm: If grain will be commingled with old grain or with grain produced on another farm, contact the ASCS office before harvesting begins.

For farms that have had an appraisal made and if it has been determined by the producer that now the crop or part of the crop will not be cut for silage or destroyed, but will be harvested for grain, you need to contact the ASCS office. In a case like this the appraisal becomes obsolete for the grain that will be harvested. Weight and sales tickets and/or farm stored measured production will take precedence over the appraisal.

Payments will be based on the difference between the production on the farm and 60% of the farm's established yield.

For more details contact the ASCS office.

Results of 1980 wheat and feed grain signup - Appomattox County for 1980 has a 73.8 percent enrollment in the program. This compares with a statewide 64.9 percent. I would like to thank all of those farmers that expressed interest in the program and I hope that it can be beneficial to all those participating. COMMODITY LOAN RATES - Loan rates have been increased on wheat, feed grains and soybeans to reflect changes in farm operating costs.

The increases and rates are as follows:

Crop	Increase	Loan Rate
Barley	12¢	$1.81
Corn	16¢	2.44
Oats	9¢	1.29
Rye	2¢	2.05
Sorghum	25¢	$3.86/cwt.
Soybeans	53¢	5.00
Wheat	50¢	2.96

Farmers in the wheat and feed grain program are eligible for commodity loans. Check with us for details.
